For the Okafors, Christmas is a time to come together and celebrate their faith and family. They start the day by attending church, where they sing Christmas carols and listen to a sermon about the birth of Jesus Christ.

After church, they return home to enjoy a traditional Nigerian Christmas dinner.

The Okafors' Christmas dinner typically includes jollof rice, chicken stew, and suya. Jollof rice is a popular West African dish made with rice, tomatoes, onions, and peppers. Chicken stew is a hearty dish made with chicken, tomatoes, onions, and peppers. Suya is a grilled meat skewer that is seasoned with a variety of spices.

After dinner, the Okafors exchange gifts and spend time together playing games and listening to music. They also enjoy watching Christmas movies and specials. The Okafors' Christmas is a time for joy, laughter, and love.

This year, the Okafors are sharing their Christmas traditions with the world through an Ethic Holiday Edition of their blog. The Ethic Holiday Edition includes recipes for traditional Nigerian Christmas dishes, as well as tips for celebrating Christmas in an ethical and sustainable way.

The Okafors believe that Christmas is a time to give back to the community. They encourage their readers to donate to charities that support families in need. They also encourage their readers to make ethical choices about the gifts they give and the food they eat.

The Okafors' Ethic Holiday Edition is a great way to learn about Nigerian culture and celebrate Christmas in a meaningful way. The recipes are easy to follow and the tips are practical and helpful. The Okafors' Ethic Holiday Edition is a must-read for anyone who wants to celebrate Christmas in a more ethical and sustainable way.
