Joseph Mallord William Turner was born on April 23, 1775, in London, England. His father was a barber and wigmaker, while his mother suffered from mental illness. Despite these challenging circumstances, Turner displayed an early aptitude for art and began taking drawing lessons at the age of 10. In 1789, at the age of 14, Turner enrolled at the Royal Academy Schools, where he received formal training in painting and drawing. During his time at the academy, he studied the works of old masters, such as Claude Lorrain and J.M.W. Turner, and developed a keen understanding of perspective and composition.

Watercolors and Oil Paintings

Turner is regarded as one of the greatest masters of watercolor painting. His watercolors were characterized by their translucency, spontaneity, and ability to capture the subtle nuances of light and atmosphere.

In addition to watercolors, Turner also produced a significant body of oil paintings. His oil paintings exhibited a bolder, more experimental approach, with thick, impasto brushstrokes and vibrant colors.

Recognition and Legacy

During his lifetime, Turner gained both critical acclaim and commercial success. He was elected a member of the Royal Academy in 1802 and became a full academician in 1812. Turner's paintings were highly sought after by collectors, and he amassed a considerable fortune.
