By Tracy Crosswhite

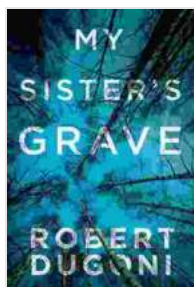

My sister's grave is a place of peace and sadness. It's where I go to remember her and all the good times we had together. It's also a place where I can grieve for her loss.

My sister died in a car accident when she was just 22 years old. She was the most beautiful, kind, and funny person I knew. I miss her every day.

I often visit her grave to talk to her and tell her how much I love her. I also leave her flowers and other mementos.

Visiting my sister's grave is a bittersweet experience. It's sad to be there, but it's also comforting to know that she's in a better place. I know that one day I'll see her again.
